

Loss of Subsidy Could Mean End of Regional
Airlines in the U. S.

Henry Drummond's great paragraph on "Courtesy," as quoted by William Feather in the Imperial Type Metal magazine:

"I expect to pass through this world but once; any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now; let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

Although transcontinental and overseas airlines are firmly established, the outlook for regional or short-haul routes has suddenly become uncertain.

On May 20 I read a detailed report in Wall Street Journal of the Eisenhower administration's plans to discontinue domestic aviation subsidies. For your information, the federal government pays airlines for carrying the mail, but this is an earned revenue; the subsidies fall into two classes — aid for the overseas airways because they connect with American territorial outposts, or have definite strategic or commercial value to our country (and this overseas subsidy will be continued); and subsidy payments to some of the smaller airlines flying here at home (which it is proposed to discontinue).

One of the big-name carriers figure in the domestic subsidy picture. Such lines as American, United, Eastern, and Delta-C. & S. get no subsidy. But 17 regional lines do, and the total bill comes to 30 million dollars a year.

I find that the regional line which flies over Hope, Trans-Texas, collects the second-largest subsidy payment of all 17 amounting to $2,582,000 a year. But right behind it is the Ozark line, serving Missouri and northeast Arkansas, with $2,011,000.

What about this 30-million-dollar annual subsidy? Is it worth while? The idea behind the Eisenhower administration's subsidy-cancellation plan is to maneuver some of the big, subsidy-free lines into taking over the regional companies' schedules. But will the big companies do it? We have just seen American, largest airline in the country, pull out of Trans-Texas in favor of regional Trans-Texas. It seems very unlikely that American would return to Trans-Texas, especially without the extra compensation that TTA is now drawing.

From the viewpoint of national progress 30 millions isn't too great a sum to be paying 17 widely-scattered airlines. America subsidized the railroads with vast land grants, and highway commercial transport is subsidized to the extent that it is given taxpayer-built highways on which to run with relatively little direct expense to the carriers. So the only principle involved in the question of aviation subsidies is the total cost, measured by what benefits we reckon it will produce.

I don't think it would be a good thing for American morale to kill off the regional lines and remove hundreds of cities from direct contact with scheduled air service. That could easily happen if subsidies were cut off completely and at once. It is my understanding that few of the regional carriers are making much profit, if any — and the whole history of aviation is that the short-range carrier operates at considerable financial risk.

In the meantime, it is worth noting that another development is coming along to further complicate the local-carrier picture. Right now, for instance, there is an argument going on in Texarkana, Ark., over whether or not to spend a lot of money improving their present airport. One faction insists that pretty soon helicopters will take over all short-haul business; and a helicopter doesn't need an airport at all — it can land in a good-sized yard. Hope folks saw this done a few years ago, when a Bell helicopter landed inside the base-21 diamond at Fair park.

It is true that helicopters are flying commercially between the various airports of metropolitan New York, and this past winter National Airlines inaugurated such service up the Florida east coast from Miami, expecting eventually to make a circuit of the entire Florida coastline and connect the smaller cities with the transcontinental planes at the big-city airports.

And eventually the helicopter may take over local service everywhere. But until this becomes a reality I would hate to see the federal government pull up stakes entirely on the regional lines now using conventional two-engine planes.

Hope's only chance for future scheduled service lies with the regional lines — whether they fly airplanes or helicopters.

And the subsidy question will probably continue regardless what equipment is used. It's a question that's as old as transportation itself.

The Malaysian flying lemur is the most completely winged of all mammals, except the bat. A membranous prolongation of the skin connects the limbs with each other, and the lemur leaps with the tail.

'Phony' Charts Charged Hurlled at the Army

By RAMOND AHR and
HERBERT FOSTER

WASHINGTON (UP) — Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy accused the Army today of producing "phony" charts about Pvt. G. David Schine's passes, but Schine's former commander declared that the charts told the truth.

The charts were introduced in the 20th day of the televised Army-McCarthy hearings to show that Schine got 16 passes at Fort Dix, N. J., in a period when the average trainee got only six.

McCarthy did not dispute these figures. But he complained that the pass record on Schine's chart was marked heavily in black while that on the chart for the average trainee chart was not.

McCarthy asserted this was a "dishonest" and "phony" attempt to receive the television audience. He and an aide went over the charts making black marks on the "typical" trainee's record.

Maj. Gen. Cornelius E. Ryan, Fort Dix commander, testified that Schine was given the passes at the request of staff members of the Senate investigating subcommittee for which he was an unpaid consultant until he was drafted Nov. 2.

Ryan said this was "absolutely not" important on the part of McCarthy and his subcommittee aides, since Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens had authorized passes for committee work. But he insisted the story told by the charts was true. He said he supplied the information on which the charts were prepared.

"I don't see anything dishonest about them," Ryan said. "They reflect the truth. They are not inaccurate and misleading."

Ryan said he personally put a stop to week-night passes for Schine on Dec. 8 after the youth had been out late several nights in a row. He said he felt Schine had to get proper sleep lest he kill himself or someone else during training with weapons.

The Army has accused McCarthy and two aides subcommittee chief counsel Roy M. Cohn and Staff Director Francis P. Carr — of using "improper means" to get special favors for Schine.

President Eisenhower has voiced the hope that a successful plan for wiping out separate schools in Washington may serve as a guide to ease the way for abolishing school segregation in 17 Southern and border states where it has been compulsory.

The plan is designed to put into effect the Supreme Court decision holding racial segregation in public schools is unconstitutional.

The five points in brief:

1. All assignments and ratings in the school system shall be based upon merit, not race or color.
2. No pupil shall be favored or discriminated against because of race or color.
3. Children in no event shall be permitted to attend schools outside the boundaries in which they live for reasons of race or color.
4. No records of pupils or personnel shall make any reference to race or color.
5. All schools shall be used to maximum efficiency without regard to race or color.

Needs to Be in 3 Places at Once

WASHINGTON (UP) — Sen. John McClellan (D-Ark) had a problem today — how to be in three places at once.

At 9 a. m. the senator Arkansas senator was slated to open the National Rivers and Harbors Congress of which he is president, and also attend the McCarthy-Army hearings by the Senate Investigating Subcommittee.

At 11 a. m., McClellan, as president, was to introduce President Eisenhower at a luncheon of the rivers and harbors group. However at that exact time, the Senate was to begin debate on the Army Civil Functions Bill, a measure in which several Arkansas projects are involved.

New Ruling Complicates Racial Problem

By ED ROGERS

ATLANTA (UP) — A prospect of broad changes in racial barriers confronted segregated areas across the nation today as a result of the Supreme Court's rulings yesterday.

The court followed up the ban it issued last week against public school segregation with decisions involving racial barriers in higher education, public housing and public recreation.

While the court's new decisions involved six specific civil rights cases in widely separated states, the South's militant opposition to racial mingling predicted the effects would be felt throughout the region.

Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia predicted the court eventually will "knock down every principle affecting the white and Negro races" and finally will overthrow the south's laws against interracial marriage.

Talmadge also predicted that President Eisenhower would suffer politically in the South from "guilt by association" because of his appointment of Earl Warren as chief justice of the United States.

In three decisions the court left standing lower court judgments which open a white junior college in Texas to Negroes, admits Negroes to a white housing project in San Francisco, and opens golf courses in public parks of Houston, Tex., to Negroes on a segregated basis.

In the other three rulings the Supreme Court ordered cases involving higher education in Louisiana and Florida, and Kentucky city's public parks to be reconsidered by lower courts in light of last week's decision outlawing public school segregation.

These cases involved the efforts of four Negroes to enter the University of Florida, the refusal of Louisiana State University to admit a Negro, and a Negro's suit to abolish segregation in city parks in Louisville, Ky.

In San Francisco a city housing spokesman said the decision "means the end of the neighborhood pattern policy" by which the city for 14 years had kept the races separate in its public housing projects.

Oren Harris' Announcement for Congress

Congressman Oren Harris made formal announcement today of his candidacy for re-election to Congress of the Fourth Congressional District and says he will campaign on "his record in the Congress and service to the people of his District, State and Nation."

He says his "record of achievement" during his fourteen years in Congress will be the basis on which he will ask for re-election and a vote of confidence of the people of his District. He is of the opinion and believes it is generally acknowledged that his training, experience and seniority attained are a valuable asset to the District and places him in a "better position to render an even more effective service in the future."

Oren Harris

By design and established procedure, the Congress operates through Committees and on the basis of seniority. With ability, which increases by experience and position on important Committees, a member becomes more effective and influential. Mr. Harris will be next to the top on the Democratic side of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, composed of thirty members. It is the third oldest Committee of the Congress and highly important because of its wide jurisdiction affecting the economic welfare of the Country. He will also be the ranking Member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, generally known as the City Council of Washington.

Congressman Harris states that he welcomes the opportunity to give a report of his stewardship and service to the people of the Fourth District. He says he will discuss in more detail during the campaign, the "issues and problems of great magnitude," which challenge the American people during these "trying and perilous" times in this new era, the Atomic Age. Although he believes it is important to have a "realistic discussion" of the issues which vitally affect our foreign policy and domestic welfare.

He recalls that he has strongly supported the principle of "Keeping America Strong," militarily, economically and morally for our National security and the preservation of our freedom and liberty. "The Continued on Page Two

American Arms Being Sent to Friendly Nations

WASHINGTON (AP) Secretary State Dulles said today the U. S. may have shipped arms to Guatemala in order to build up a Communist bastion near the Panama Canal.

Dulles told a news conference that was one possible object of the arms shipment last week. Poland amounting to $200,000 valued at 10 million dollars said this had made Guatemala dominant military power in Central America.

Dulles also declared that the United States would not support an appeal to the United Nations for the dispatch of an observation mission to Southern Asia. Dulles also said that prospects for some kind of United Nations action looked better than they had recently.

The United States government had made clear to the French talks now under way the terms and conditions under which it would possible to consider American intervention in the Indochina. The conditions include the employment of approval by Congress and creation of a new Anti-Communist coalition in Southeast Asia.

The United States has not sent a new mission to Asia. President Eisenhower has ordered that the United States should not send a new mission to Asia. President Eisenhower has ordered that the United States should not send a new mission to Asia.

Prime Minister Mendez Turbay of Guatemala said the United States in the period June 14, 1954, economic and financial matters. Dulles discussed the Guatemala end Indochina situation in response to questions from reporters after he had issued a statement noting the Guatemala issue.

American nations have sent massive shipments of arms to Guatemala. In a move to counter the Communist shipment of arms, the United States is firing rifles and machine guns and other light combat gear to friendly nations in Central America.

The State Department announced late yesterday that arms are being shipped to Guatemala. The arms are being shipped to Guatemala. The arms are being shipped to Guatemala.

He pointedly sidestepped mention of Guatemala, which recalled its envoy from Guatemala. He said Honduras is a good friend.

However, the Chicago Tribune said last night that the shipment of arms to Guatemala was a move to counter the Communist shipment of arms to Guatemala.

U. S. Ambassador John E. Hoff said he had heard of no arms border shipments.

In Washington, Lincoln Steffens said that the arms shipment was a move to counter the Communist shipment of arms to Guatemala.

Meanwhile, diplomats in Guatemala are working to counter the Communist shipment of arms to Guatemala.

Labor Leader Is Against McClellan

LITTLE ROCK — Arkansas Sen. John McClellan yesterday was identified by a southern labor leader as "an enemy of the people."

Charles M. Houk of Nashville, Tenn., told delegates to the 48th annual convention of the Arkansas Federation of Labor here, "if you can't call Sen. McClellan an enemy of the people, then I don't know what you would call an enemy."

Houk is southern regional director of Labor's League for Political Education (AFL). "It's the duty of the league," he said, "to help the people punish our enemies, and I'm sure that by a vast majority, labor in Arkansas will do that this year."

McClellan will, in the summer primaries, seek re-nomination to his Senate post. His chief opponent is former Gov. Sid McMath.

Houk charged that McClellan consistently had voted against the people of Arkansas — "casting 24 'wrong' votes out of 30."

"Houk said there was no excuse for a senator 'who claims to be a Democrat' to have a voting record like that."

Ike May Be Ready to Lash at Enemies

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

WASHINGTON — A White House aide's criticism of Democrats in Congress raised a question today whether President Eisenhower or himself may be getting ready to toss a few political brickbats. If he does it will be a sharp departure from the kind of Democratic role he has played consistently since taking office 18 months ago.

Criticism of the opposition party voiced yesterday by Bernard M. Shanley one of the President's key aides, was something quite new. Speaking off the cuff to a meeting of the Wine and Spirits Wholesalers Assn., Shanley accused Democrats in Congress of throwing "important roadblocks" in the path of the administration's legislative program.

It was the first time anybody high on the White House staff has sounded so bluntly against the Democrats.

In doing so, Presidential Special Counsel Shanley reportedly had Eisenhower's approval. And that touched off speculation that the President may be getting set to speak out himself, perhaps with an eye to the coming congressional elections.

Eisenhower has said the unless the Republicans enact what he terms a dynamic and progressive program, they won't deserve to win in the November elections. But so far he has refrained from cutting loose at the Democrats.

Arkansas Federation president, said McMath would meet today with out-of-town women delegates to an effort to arrange household meetings in their neighborhoods.

threat of Communist aggression," he says, "is real and apparent against the free world. The Communist design is directed against this country. I have continuously opposed Communism, communist aggression and infiltration at every opportunity."

"It is highly important that we re-establish a bipartisan foreign policy to more effectively resist the communist threat with united effort and determination," Mr. Harris strongly emphasizes.

"We are challenged today," he said, "with a grave decision in Indonesia. We have been sending supplies and weapons to Indo-China to resist Communism. We have sent technicians on request and have twice been called upon to send our Air Force into action in that war." "I am opposed to unilateral action of this country in intervening in the Indo-China War and the sending of our troops under present conditions and circumstances and without the approval of Congress. Though we must continue to resist Communism, we should not enter a war to promote and maintain Colonialism. This is a test for the United Nations and for the policy of 'united action'."

"I shall also discuss during the course of the campaign," the Congressman said, "the record on other questions, which will include:

A sound, stable Agricultural program which will offer balanced and diversified farming with a guaranteed 90% price support of basic commodities, which will give a return for farm products comparable to the price farmers must pay for what they purchase. This to be accompanied by adequate production controls to avoid surpluses in excessive quantities and then only by free election of the farmers themselves;

Soil conservation, flood control, agricultural conservation and the preservation of our natural resources;

The formation of policies for diplomatic victories that will permit a further reduction of taxes and a balanced national budget;

Adjustment of the Minimum Wage and Hour Act and the expansion of the Old Age Assistance and the Social Security program. The protection of employment rights and opportunities of all of our people;

Adequate provisions for the care and support of veterans; their widows and minor children — a responsibility to which we are committed and obligated for those who fought for their country and the preservation of the American way of life;

Hospital construction and improvement of health facilities under our system of co-operation with the medical profession as against the socialization of medicine under any disguise of so-called National Health Insurance or related proposals;

More adequate transportation facilities through Federal Aid for highway construction, air transportation, airports, railroads and navigation on the Ouachita River. We should take great pride in overcoming serious handicaps in maintaining locks and dams on the Ouachita River, which enhances a most important segment of the economy through the entire area."

Congressman Harris said he was proud of the accomplishments and the progress made during the years he had the honor and privilege to serve in Congress. "Under these programs and the system of free enterprise, I have watched the developing of our state, providing increased opportunities for our people."

"I am deeply grateful for the confidence, loyalty and continued friendship I have enjoyed with our people. I would greatly appreciate the privilege of returning to Congress and wish to give assurance that I shall make every effort to serve in a manner that would merit this confidence."

American Arms

Home, Ginga (Yankee) to North American women.

Developments have piled one upon another, since the State Department last week announced the arrival of a freighter-load of arms at a Guatemalan port. The department said they were loaded at Stettin in Communist Poland.

That shipment reportedly was the equivalent of 70 freight cars and worth 10 million dollars.

More arms were said to be on the high seas bound for Guatemala, which this country has charged with following the Communist line. Guatemala's foreign minister denied this emphatically.

Of the original shipment, Toriello said: "The equipment Guatemala has bought will never be used for anything else than to maintain internal peace."

Student Completes 1,500 Mile Trek

ST. FRANCIS — Dan Marsh, a 20-year-old student of botany at Arkansas State College, today expects to complete his 1,500-mile trek around Arkansas' borders.

Marsh started his trip last Feb. 21, and expects to reach his starting point three miles east of Paragould this afternoon.

Marsh made the trip to study plant and animal life in the state.

U. S. Acts to Break Up Black Market

FRANKFURT, Germany (UP)—The U. S. armed services today called in all military money used by American troops overseas and issued new currency in a wide crackdown on black-market trading.

More than 500,000 servicemen, American government employees and their families in Europe were told this morning to exchange their "scrip" dollars by noon. At 12:01 p. m. (7:01 a. m. EDT), all the old money became as worthless as Confederate bills.

The U. S. Navy canceled all liberties and ordered all sailors restricted during the exchange. Post exchange shops and cafeterias were ghostly quiet because no one had any money to spend.

In Hong Kong, where scrip had served as an international currency and money changers held an estimated $100,000 worth, all sailors and officers were ordered back to U. S. Navy ships immediately. All shore leaves were canceled.

Finance officers said this was the "fifth or sixth" U. S. military money conversion since the war. The last occurred June 22, 1951. The currency conversion was put into effect in all foreign countries where military money is used for purchases in U. S. military stores, army financial officers said.

Although black market transactions are not as heavy as they were immediately after the end of the war, illegal traffic in military dollars is still considered dangerous.

China Rejects India's Plan for Cease Fire

GENEVA (UP)—Communist China rejected Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's proposal for an immediate cease-fire in Indo-China, informed Geneva conference sources disclosed today.

Red Chinese Premier-Foreign Minister Chou En-lai personally turned down the two-point plan after it had been presented to him by V. K. Krishna Menon, India's roving ambassador.

The plan, according to the sources, called for:
1. An immediate halt in the fighting.

2. Formation of a good offices committee composed of Asian neutrals to aid the two sides in working out a political settlement once the truce became effective.

Chou's action was disclosed as the East and West prepared to start discussion of the mechanics of a cease-fire at the ninth session of Indochina peace talks.

Agreement to get down to details on the cease-fire was reached at yesterday's session after French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault offered a formula that bypassed the deadlocked issue of treating two of the Indochinese states Laos and Cambodia separately from the third, Viet Nam, as the West demands.
